Disapprove..... 65%
Not sure 6%

Q2 In 7 states and the District of Columbia mentally capable adults, who are dying of a terminal disease with no hope of recovery, have the legal option to request a medication to bring about their own death. Do you think that Maryland should allow this as well, or not?

Think Maryland should allow mentally capable adults, who are dying of a terminal disease with no hope of recovery, to have the legal option to request a medication to bring about their own death 66%
Do not think Maryland should allow mentally capable adults, who are dying of a terminal disease with no hope of recovery, to have the legal option to request a medication to bring about their own death 20%
Not Sure..... 13%

Q3 Supporters say the decisions of terminally ill patients to receive medication to bring about their own death should be private and personal between patients, their families, their faith, and their physicians. Terminally ill patients who thoughtfully consider their situation should have the option to die peacefully and on their own terms. Having heard this, let me ask you again: do you support or oppose allowing mentally capable adults, who are dying of a terminal disease with no hope of recovery, to have the legal option to request a medication to bring about their own death?

Support 68%
Oppose 21%
Not sure 11%

Q4 Opponents say patients at the end of their life are at their most vulnerable. They need extra protection from unscrupulous doctors or family members who might put convenience ahead of human life. Doctor-assisted suicide goes against the Hippocratic Oath doctors take to do no harm, and the government should not sanction it. Having heard this, let me ask you one more time: do you support or oppose allowing mentally capable adults, who are dying of a terminal disease with no hope of recovery, to have the legal option to request a medication to bring about their own death?

Support 62%
Oppose 25%
Not sure 13%
